Preface

'Latest Trends in Cyber Law', is a brief work at a right time. Cyber law is comparatively a new development, which needs to be inquired and analyzed into to apprehend the future of Law. This is far from a complete work but it touches on some important points and identifies global trends focusing on the important aspects of changing facets of IPR in terms of cyber enforcement.

Cyber law is often seen as a developing field, it encompasses a broad range of topics such as Intellectual property, data privacy etc. Some laws regarding cyber law are clearly defined. But despite that, few aspects narrow the scope where in the cyber law is the least developed like the context of data privacy and unauthorized access, they are often the most abused and subjected to cybercrimes.

These laws are yet to be developed and they are enforced by legislation covering traditional communication networks such as mail and phone networks. The newly emerging concerns need strict enforcement and detection methods. With a view to make cyber law enforcement effective the emerging developments are discussed in the book. To understand the nuances better a bit of background information on cybercrime and cyber law is provided.

This book will be helpful to the students, teachers as well as professionals and will lead to further discussion and research on the stated aspects of Cyber Law.
